Confederacy of Treaty No. 6 First Nations PRESS RELEASE

TREATY NO. 6 CONFEDERACY TROUBLED BY ALBERTA'S PASSING OF BILL 14

Politically motivated changes to Citizen Initiative Act "should alarm all Albertans"

December 11, 2025 (Treaty No. 6 Territory) — The Government of Alberta has passed Bill 14, making major changes to the Citizen Initiative Act. These changes raise serious concerns for First Nations and all Albertans regarding their legal rights and the democratic process. The Confederacy of Treaty No. 6 First Nations rejects Bill 14, while separatists in this province are celebrating a victory.

"This is disappointing from a government that speaks often about its respect for First Nations. Serious concerns were raised earlier this year about how a citizen initiative for a referendum on Alberta separation would be against Treaty and completely illegal." says Confederacy of Treaty No. 6 First Nations Grand Chief Greg Desjarlais. "At that time, language guaranteeing Constitutional and Treaty Rights was added to the Citizen Initiative Act. It seems while we were in court defeating the separatism question the Premier was pressured by UCP members to quickly bring in Bill 14, changing the rules and removing those protections. This Bill was created on behalf of a loud minority with no respect for Albertans or the Treaty relationship and it guarantees the separatism question will be asked again."

Bill 14 removes safeguards ensuring citizen initiative petitions cannot breach sections 1-35 of the Constitution Act, 1982. Bill 14 enables ballot questions that disregard Albertans' Charter and Treaty Rights. The changes enacted by this Bill remove protections for Constitutional, Treaty and human rights from the process. As well, the power to question the legality of referendum questions has been taken away from Alberta's Chief Electoral Officer, interfering with their democratic responsibilities. This should be alarming for all Albertans.

The Confederacy of Treaty No. 6 First Nations stands firmly against any legislation that undermines Constitutional protections and the legal status of Treaty. Bill 14 risks silencing First Nations voices and eroding the rule of law in Alberta.

From Ermineskin to the World Stage: Kaiden Roan Shirt's Journey

Ermineskin Cree Nation proudly celebrates one of its own, Kaiden Roan Shirt. A young athlete whose dedication, bravery, and passion for soccer are opening doors far beyond his community, inspiring Indigenous youth everywhere.

Kaiden recently travelled to Salou, Spain, to compete in the prestigious Surf Cup International Soccer Tournament with his academy team. This journey marked his third time being invited to train or play in Spain, and it was his first chance to face international teams on a world stage. For this young athlete, it was so much more than a tournament; it was a powerful reminder that Indigenous youth have every right to pursue their dreams, wherever they may lead.

The experience began with a remarkable opening ceremony, reminiscent of the Olympic Games. Teams from England, Thailand, Australia, and various African nations marched in proudly, united by their love of sport. Standing among them, Kaiden carried not just his team's colors, but also the pride of his community.

On the field, Kaiden rose to the challenge, scoring the third goal in a hard-fought 4-2 victory over Kiyami United from South Africa, helping his team secure a spot in the Silver Semi Medal Finals. Although they faced one of Spain's top academy teams in the final match and ended up losing, the players showcased heart, resilience, and skill, proving they could compete at the highest levels.

Beyond the tournament, Kaiden soaked up the excitement of professional soccer. He attended a live match between Girona and Real Madrid, captivated by the electric atmosphere created by thousands of fans, fireworks, marching bands, and powerful chants echoing throughout the stadium. A standout moment was when he watched his favourite player, Kylian Mbappé, take the field in person, a truly inspiring experience for any young athlete.

To top off this once-in-a-lifetime adventure, Kaiden's academy had the opportunity to train with Girona for two days and tour their stadium, walking the very halls that professional players navigate. For a young Indigenous athlete, these experiences serve as powerful reminders that dreams are not only valid but also achievable and worth pursuing.

Kaiden Roan Shirt's journey sends a strong message to Indigenous youth everywhere: your talent is significant, your culture is a source of strength, and your aspirations know no bounds. Through hard work, humility, and pride in his identity and heritage, Kaiden continues to make the Ermineskin community proud.

This is just the beginning.

Cooper Young, Awarded Open Basketball Academy Scholarship

Our community is thrilled to celebrate Cooper Young, a remarkable 10-year-old athlete from the Ermineskin Cree Nation, whose passion for basketball has earned him one of this year's EM Scholarships from the Open Basketball Academy (OBA). Each year, only four athletes are selected for this prestigious award, which offers private training sessions valued at $500.

In his application, Cooper expressed deep gratitude for his family, community, and the Nations linked to him. As a proud Nehiyaw from Ermineskin Cree Nation, he has family ties that extend across Maskwacis, Louis Bull Tribe, Samson Cree Nation, Tsuut'ina Nation, Wetaskiwin, and Millet.

Cooper's basketball journey began at the age of eight when he joined the Swarm/SEBA Developmental program, where he learned the game's fundamentals. However, it was the Alberta Indigenous Games that truly ignited his love for basketball. Playing on an underage Maskwacis team comprised of kids who had never practiced together, he not only faced competition but also experienced the strength of community. Despite losing every game that year, he fondly describes that time as "so fun," creating lasting friendships and nurturing his passion for sport.

From that point, Cooper continued to develop his skills, competing in Swarm's U11 league and later joining the Open Basketball Academy for the spring season. He credits OBA and his coach, Evan, for helping him make significant progress, including training alongside older junior high and high school athletes. This fall, he is taking on the challenge of playing in Division 1 with Swarm, where he currently leads his team in scoring a testament to the training and confidence he gained through OBA.

In his application essay, Cooper articulated how the EM Scholarship would enable him to enhance his skills through personalized coaching further. He hopes that the private sessions will help him improve his defence, basketball IQ, and overall gameplay, positioning him to help his team compete for the provincial title again this year.

The entire community shares in Cooper's excitement and pride. His dedication, humility, and strong connection to his culture exemplify the values we cherish in our youth. This achievement not only highlights his talent but also reflects the unwavering support from his family, coaches, and community members who inspire him on his journey.

We extend our heartfelt congratulations to Cooper on receiving the EM Scholarship, and we eagerly await the opportunity to witness his growth both as an athlete and as a young leader representing the Ermineskin Cree Nation with pride. Keep pushing forward, Cooper, your community stands firmly behind you every step of the way.

Walking Together, Learning Together

The World Indigenous Peoples' Conference on Education (WIPCE) in Aotearoa (New Zealand) this year was much more than just a gathering; it served as a powerful reminder of our identity, our roots, and the responsibilities we carry for future generations. As trustees, educators, and community members, the time at WIPCE 2025 reaffirmed a profound truth: education flourishes when it is anchored in culture, language, relationships, and shared knowledge. Coming together with Indigenous educators and leaders from across the globe highlighted that, although our nations are unique, our values, challenges, and aspirations for our children are deeply interconnected.

Throughout the week, participants immersed themselves in keynote addresses, breakout sessions, cultural teachings, land-based learning experiences, and ceremonial gatherings that celebrated both ancestral wisdom and contemporary educational innovations. The conference provided a platform for sharing successful community-driven education models, strategies for language revitalization, governance approaches, and pathways to self-determination. Just as crucial were the moments of connection storytelling, ceremony, and relationship-building that reminded us that education transcends mere curriculum; it is about identity, responsibility, and belonging. WIPCE 2025 reinforced the idea that Indigenous peoples worldwide are spearheading powerful movements to reclaim education as a vital instrument for cultural survival, community resilience, and the well-being of future generations.

Maureen Ward-Caisse, EETF Board Chair, reflected on the immense care and vision shown by the conference hosts, noting that the week was filled with meaningful connections, cultural exchange, land-based learning, and knowledge sharing. One of the strongest messages she carried home was the urgent importance of protecting and revitalizing Indigenous languages and embedding them meaningfully within our education systems. Language is not simply a subject it is identity, worldview, and future. As a trustee, she emphasized the responsibility to listen carefully to the needs of our children and families, to understand their realities, and to advocate boldly for education systems that honour culture while preparing learners for higher education and livelihood. WIPCE served as both inspiration and a call to action.

For Kyle Wolfe, the conference highlighted the power of personal connection across nations. In a deeply moving moment, he gifted Professor Ella Henry of Auckland University of Technology with a Treaty 6/

Neyaskweyahk medallion, sharing the history of Ermine-skin Cree Nation and Maskwacis. Professor Henry, an internationally respected leader in Māori education, was moved to tears and, in return, gifted the lei she was wearing to Kyle's daughter, Kenzie Wolfe. This exchange became a living example of what WIPCE represents: respect, reciprocity, and the passing of knowledge and love between generations. It demonstrated how education extends beyond institutions; it lives in relationships, stories, and shared humanity.

Reflections from WIPCE 2025

Trustee Josephine Small shared how meaningful it was to walk on the traditional homelands of the Māori people, experiencing their land, history, and culture firsthand. What made the journey especially powerful was being able to attend alongside her granddaughter, Ryland Mendoza. Experiencing WIPCE through multiple generations underscored the heart of Indigenous education: learning together, honouring the past, and preparing the next generation to walk proudly in both cultural and academic worlds.

For Tanya McDougall, the trip was a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity made possible through collective effort, fundraising, and commitment. One highlight was connecting with Māori organizers who were deeply interested in the Cree names tattooed on her skin. This connection led to a local radio interview where Tanya shared teachings about spiritual names, iskewak (womanhood), and miyo opik-inawasowin good child rearing. Another powerful experience was participating in a medicine walk on sacred lands, learning about Māori creation stories and their land-back movement. Tanya reflected on how affirming it was to recognize shared worldviews and parallel struggles, reminding us that Indigenous peoples across the globe continue to walk similar paths of resistance, healing, and renewal through education.

Trustee Danika Lightning described Aotearoa as a beautiful land where she felt welcomed not only by the people, but by their ancestors. Being surrounded by Indigenous peoples from many countries was initially overwhelming, yet deeply affirming. She noted that the most powerful takeaway from the many sessions was witnessing the dedication of educators and leaders who are creating successful, community-driven programs. A prevailing theme was the importance of community, family, and parental engagement—whether through parents learning their language alongside their children, or through land-based programs that teach reciprocity, responsibility, and love for the land. Danika highlighted presentations that reinforced the need for collaborative approaches to education, moving away from siloed systems toward collective, relationship-based models that see students as whole people. She also reflected on the foresight of past leaders who established the education trust decades ago, and the ongoing responsibility trustees carry to ensure it continues to evolve to meet the changing needs of students today. In closing, she reminded us of one of WIPCE's most powerful messages: the answers already live within our communities—we gather to remember them.

Together, these reflections tell one story: when we connect, listen, and learn from one another, education becomes a tool for empowerment, healing, and self-determination. WIPCE 2025 reminded us that Indigenous education is strongest when it is grounded in language, culture, land, and community—and when knowledge is shared across generations and nations. As trustees, we return home inspired, humbled, and committed to carrying these teachings forward, ensuring that our children not only succeed, but thrive as proud learners, leaders, and good ancestors.
